Open Campaign To Organize Tinley Park Frozen Food Lockers

A concerted drive has been launched in Tinley Park for the organization of a Frozen Food Locker Plant in Tinley Park. This week Lenard Tebor, Chicago, has been conferring with Tinley Park merchants and business men and it has been decided to launch an intensive campaign to get the public rent enough of the lockers to enable the promoters to obtain a government priority for the purchase of the needed equipment and the establishment of the locker plant itself.

In commenting on the proposed plant, Mr. Tebor pointed out that 60 per cent of the proposed lockers must be rented in advance and the money deposited in escrow at a bank before a priority will be issued.

He further pointed out that the Chicago Heights National Bank will be named as escrow agent. Applications for lockers and rent money for same can be delivered or mailed to the Bremen State Bank in Tinley for transmittal to Chicago Heights.

Mr. Tebor states that after the locker plant is assured plans will be formulated for the erection of a new locker plant building or if this can not be done, then a suitable site will be leased. Sample lockers are now on display at the Bremen State Bank in Tinley Park.

Applications are available in Tinley Park at Vogt's Dept. Store, Tinley Park Times, Cavett's Drug Store, Bremen State Bank and Bettenhausen Hardware Store.

Processing service charges will not exceed those charged by other locker plants in nearby towns.

Pre-School Age Children To Be Examined

A new State Health and Physical Education Law, which has been designed to improve the health and physical fitness of the youth of Illinois, was passed at the last session of the State Legislature.

These examinations must be made by physicians and dentists licensed to practice in Illinois. A record of each examination will be kept by the school authorities.

Every child who goes to his family physician for physical examination or to his family dentist for dental examination, should get a report of such examination and present this record to his teacher upon entering school this fall. Congressman Busbey was formerly State Director of Americanism, Department of Illinois, American Legion, and is very familiar with the technique by which these two organizations working with the New Dealers on the Federal payroll, are out to defeat sitting Congressmen who will not do their bidding.

2 Brothers Are Held To Grand Jury

In the Stanger-Scott family row in Mokena in which Luther Scott, 52 years old, a world 1 veteran and a man of slender and light built, was attacked by two husky men and savagely beaten, died in the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet last Friday morning and the brothers, Louis and William Stanger the former of Mokena, the latter of Chicago, are now in the Will County jail on a murder charge.

A coroner's jury Thursday of this week recommended that William and Louis Stanger be held to the grand jury for manslaughter, as the result of their connection with the death of Scott.

The jury found that Scott died of cerebral hemorrhages, severe injuries and paralysis which led to pneumonia and that these injuries had been caused by the Stanger brothers.

A neighbor of the Scott's who witnessed the fight, said when he got on the scene to pull Louis off the prostrate form of Scott, Louis had hold of the hair of Scott's head and was bouncing the latter's head on a concrete walk like a rubber ball.

Mr. Luther Scott who was 52 years old and who was taken to Silver Cross hospital in a semi-conscious condition a week ago Saturday, died last Friday morning.

With Scott's death, murder warrants were issued by State's Attorney James E. Burke for Louis and William Stanger. These brothers who were alleged to have beaten Mr. Scott, were arrested by the sheriff's deputies following the fight and brought to the county jail. They were held on disorderly conduct warrants pending the outcome of Scott's injuries, but they were released last Tuesday on bonds of $500 each.

Burke said the brothers would be held on the murder warrants subject to further investigations and pending the verdict of the coroner's jury.

According to a report at the sheriff's office, the melee involving Scott and the Stanger brothers was the aftermath of the arrest of Virgil Scott, son of Luther. Virgil was arrested on the complaint of his wife Elaine, a sister of the Stangers. Last week she filed a divorce suit against Virgil on the grounds of cruelty.

Scott was an employee of the Mokena Wallpaper mill and had lived in Mokena for about five years. Prior to that he farmed in the vicinity of Peotone. A veteran of World War 1, he was a member of the Peotone American Legion post.

Surviving are the widow, Laura; two sons, Staff Sgt. James, with the army somewhere in England and Virgil; a daughter, May of Mokena; his mother, Mrs. Mary Scott of Chicago; three brothers, Elmer, Hughie and William of Newton, Ill.; and four sisters, Mrs. Lennie Matlock of Newton, Mrs. Nella Partlow and Mrs. Marie Gaddy of Chicago and Mrs. Cleo Moe of Eau Claire, Wis.

The body was taken to the Hirsch Funeral Home at Chicago Heights and from there to Newton, Ill., where funeral services were held Monday in the First Christian church there. Burial was made in the Riverside cemetery at Newton.

CREDIT WHERE DUE

Across the Potomac, in the sprawling Pentagon building, Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, gives all credit for U. S. invasion success to the boys over there, their officers and to General Eisenhower. However, those who have watched lean, graying General Marshall close-up during the tense months of the war, know how he too has worked, planned, dreamed almost every detail of the invasion.

Three years ago, before we entered the war but when everyone knew it was a certainty that we would, this columnist asked General Marshall what chance there was of a British cross-channel invasion.

"Do you realize what it takes to land an army in France?" he replied. "It takes not merely ships and men—and naval vessels to protect those ships. It also means docks, warehouses, railroad terminals, and freight cars by the thousand. But especially it means docks—some place to land. In the last war, we didn't have to worry about any of these things. The French supplied them. But in this war"—he shook his head ruefully—"it is different."

As he talked, Marshall thought back to 1917-18, when he was only 36 and a captain. At that time, he performed a modern miracle of maneuvering—second only to that of the present second front. He worked out for Pershing the plan whereby one million men were transferred from the St. Mihiel to the Meuse-Argonne front.

Nineteen railroads, 34 hospitals, 40,000 tons of ammunition, 93,000 horses, 164 miles of railway, 87 supply depots and 4,000 cannon all were moved up just beyond the German lines—and the enemy didn't even know it.

COOPERATION WITH EISENHOWER

A general in modern warfare does not ride into battle waving a sword. He sits behind a desk. And this time General Marshall, instead of being close to the battle-front, has done his planning from behind.

And unlike the situation in the last war, Marshall and his European commander cooperate beautifully. They are close friends. In the last war, General Pershing was in bitter conflict with Gen. Tasker Bliss, the U. S. chief of staff; later with Gen. Peyton March, who succeeded Bliss.

Today, Marshall and Eisenhower are considered Pershing's boys. He is strong for both of them. And every Sunday before the war got too tense, General Marshall went out to Walter Reed hospital to chat with his former chief. Pershing still believes he can win wars, and gives Marshall his opinion on various strategic problems. After each interview, Marshall rises and salutes.

"Thank you, General," he says. "Thank you, General," is the reply.

NOTE—General Marshall is one of the few chiefs of staff we have had who did not go to West Point. Due to the fact that his father was about the only Democrat in Uniontown, Pa., during the McKinley administration, he could get no West Point appointment, went to Virginia Military Institute instead.

THEY DIDN'T KNOW EITHER

War department officials are laughing behind their hands at the fact that military intelligence, supposed to know all about everything going on behind enemies' lines and inside our own lines, chose D-day to move their offices. In the Pentagon building, where military intelligence, or G-2, is housed, moving day was called "G-2's D-day." They "invaded" their new offices.

But never could they have chosen a worse day to move than the Allied D-day. Other war department officers kept calling up G-2, asking for information.

"Sorry," said the operator, "but the telephones are all torn out. G-2 is moving."

Furniture was being moved down corridors, files of secret information were being shunted from one place to another. Everything was confusion on the one day which meant most to the war.

Apparently, military intelligence, supposed to know everything, didn't know when the big day was to cross the English channel was scheduled.

REASON FOR CRACKDOWN

Now it can be revealed why President Roosevelt was so tough in his crackdown on the Irish regarding the removal of Axis diplomats.

It long had been planned, though a strict secret, to land on the Cherbourg peninsula. To reach it, many U. S. troops had to steam through the Irish sea.

Naturally, the President wanted no scrap of information regarding the early passage of landing barges through the Irish sea to leak out in any manner, shape or form.

Thousands of Nazis Rounded Up

Some of the 10,000 Nazi prisoners taken in France and shipped to England for internment during the first days of the invasion. Almost every racial type of Europe is represented in this group being marched ashore in England. Among the prisoners taken in Nazi uniforms were a large number of Japanese.

Yanks Land at Normandy

Battle-equipped American troops splash ashore to the Normandy coast of France in initial phase of the beachhead landings. Casualties were reported light and replacements were rushed ashore hour after hour. Little opposition was encountered during the landing of these particular Yanks, although during landing operations at other beachheads the casualties were heavier.

Guest of the Vatican Freed

Mrs. Tittman, wife of the American charge d'affaires, was among the many Americans who were given protection in the Vatican when the United States entered the war. She is shown at the gates of Vatican City as she welcomed entering Americans of the victorious fifth army. Vatican is now giving protection to Nazi diplomats caught in Rome.

They will continue their debates after their parties meet in Chicago to select winners.

ENTERING THE PROMISED LAND

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 1:1-9; 23:1-5. GOLDEN TEXT—Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.—Joshua 1:9.

The forward look is typical of God's people. They are always to go on. They are to be like Israel, to whom came the word, "Moses is dead," but "now therefore arise and go"—under a new leader.

Our lessons for this quarter center around the experiences of Israel from Joshua to David, a period rich in historical data, much of it with most helpful spiritual application. It affords a real opportunity for effective teaching.

Moses was now dead, but that only brought forth

I. God's Provision of a New Leader (1:1, 2).

God buries His workmen at the end of their day of labor, but God's work goes on. The people had become attached to Moses and had learned to trust his leadership (even though they often murmured). With his death we might have assumed that there would be a letdown, but that was not in God's plan.

The Lord works through men. He gives them abilities and uses them for His glory—often in a way which astonishes them and others. But let them not become proud, for God has someone to take their place when they are gone. They are not indispensable.

Sometimes people talk as though all the great leaders of the church had died, or were dying. Yet God has some obedient men who are ready to step into the gap.

Joshua was ready, when God was ready, and he stepped into leadership.

II. God's Promise of Victory (1:3-5).

The promise given to Moses was still good. God's promises are always good. They are the only really stable thing in a trembling universe. The question is, Are we ready to accept Him at His word?

If we love were but more simple, We should take Him at His word; And our lives would be all sunshine In the sweetness of our Lord. —Faber.

They were to step out by faith. The land was promised to them only as the sole of their foot should tread upon it. Israel never took out the full promise of verse 4. They lacked faith. Do we?

God honors those who believe Him and who move forward by faith to plant the foot of spiritual conquest in new territory. Some are doing it now. Are we?

The enemies of God's people were many and mighty, but they were not able to stand in the way of God's people when they were moving forward for Him. Here again, Israel failed. They did not drive them out, because they did not take God at His word. The application of that truth to us is obvious.

III. God's Plea for Obedience and Courage (1:6-9).

"Be strong and of good courage." There is a side to the believer's character which calls for submission, for turning everything over to God, for being sweet and spiritual. All that is good and very desirable, but it can never be substituted for that other side which shows virile courage and fearless abandon to the cause of our God.

Joshua was made to realize—as we must too—that serving God (and especially in a place of leadership) calls for a measure of high courage unsurpassed in any other pursuit of man. It takes all there is of a man to be a real follower of Christ—be sure of that!

This courage, however, is not to be confused with a foolhardy bravery which is reckless and unintelligent. No indeed, for it is based on the observance of God's law (v. 7).

Note (v. 8) the importance of meditating upon God's Word. This (which is really a lost art in our day) means so absorbing the principles of the Word that our very lives are conditioned by them, and we are made ready to meet every problem in the light of its teaching.

IV. God's Purpose for the Future (23:1-5).

Passing all the great and stirring experiences of Joshua, we have now a glimpse of his closing days. He was counseling the people regarding the future.

It is the mark of a great man that he looks beyond the end of his own short existence and plans for the future. Many there are who are not concerned about what happens once they are gone. They have no vision, no concern about the continuity of life, in fact they come and go almost like the beasts of the field.

What about the future? Joshua reminded them that every blessing they had received, every victory they had won, everything, had come from the hand of God. There and there alone was their hope for the future. And it was enough!

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling. Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, pilot of a Flying Fortress, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men were killed while fleeing for shelter, and Old 99, with many other Forts, was demolished on the ground. After escaping to Australia, what is left of their squadron flies to Java, where they go on many missions over the Philippines, and finally defend Java itself. Java falls to the Japs and the U. S. fliers evacuate to Australia to carry on the war from there. They land on Broome field, which is wrecked by Japs shortly after, but escape to Melbourne. Kurtz becomes pilot of "The Swallow," the air force general's plane.

CHAPTER XXI

"In Australia, the Air Force had to build from the ground up. Before General MacArthur arrived from the Philippines we had located and were building our advance and supply bases all over North Australia from Darwin to Townsville. American engineers were pouring in, and General Brett put them to work. We were also improving Moresby, our problem child, and the Air Force staff had laid down its strategic plan for clearing Australia's northeast shoulder of the threat of Jap air power so that when we had the necessary men and equipment, we could head back into the Philippines.

"The old 19th Bombardment Group was back in business now in North Australia, and beginning in April of that year we were pounding the Jap base at Rabaul in New Britain several times a week.

"Meanwhile the Philippines were tottering. Bataan had fallen; Corregidor seemed about to go; and we were working feverishly to rescue desperately needed Air Force personnel from Del Monte Field on Mindanao. Al Mueller, who was now flying a transport, told me of his last trip in. He said the place looked so shaky he was scared even to be looking that way now. It was a seventeen-hundred-mile flight, and there was a chance that there might not be enough gas left at Del Monte to get him back to Australia. But the pilots, navigators, and ground crews still on Mindanao were worth their weight in gold to us, so Al started out.

"He got right over Del Monte Field. Things looked quiet on the ground, and he was circling, waiting for the signal to come on in, which for some reason seemed delayed. Circling, Al couldn't understand this until from Australia, seventeen hundred miles away, crackles a radio message telling him under no circumstances to land. Corregidor and Mindanao had surrendered to the Japanese while he had been en route.

"There he was, eight hours from home base and with only a few hours' gas left. But luckily he'd provided against this before he left. He'd told the Navy that if the Philippines caved while he was in the air and he couldn't refuel at Mindanao, he'd beach his plane on a little jungle island, and he showed it to them on the map, so they could pick him up if they could get through.

"Now he headed for this island, looked its beach over, and set her down in the surf. The rocks in a few seconds made junk of his big four-motored Liberator.

"Then, according to Al, the days seemed like years, although only five of them passed before a submarine periscope popped up in the cove and carefully scanned the horizon for Jap planes before the craft surfaced to take him and his crew aboard.

"During March the hot spot was Darwin, which the Aussies called the Coventry of Australia because the Japanese had come over on February nineteenth and not only flattened its little town of four thousand but on the airfield wiped out an American fighter group en route to the Java war.

"At that time it was only a little Australian field with almost no anti-aircraft. The RAAF boys were good lads, trying hard but getting nowhere, lacking both training and equipment.

"The American fighter group perched on that field, which 'Sluggo' Pell was leading toward Java, had no warning until they heard the sound of the Jap motors. Sluggo wanted to save his planes if he could, so instead of diving for the foxholes (the Japs were already strafing) he tried desperately to get his boys off.

"Sluggo was shot down at 50 feet while his landing gear was still retracting, and before he'd had time to drop his belly tank. He tried to bail out, but of course he was too low. A previous squadron had actually managed to get into the air, but Sluggo's were all either shot down on the take-off or killed in their cockpits before they cleared the runway, or else strafed and set afire while they were taxiing into position. It had been a field day for the Zeros.

"Word now came through that a force of ten Jap bombers and three fighters was on its way to Darwin. It was what Squeeze had been waiting for. He hit them far out at sea. Squeeze has a clever tactical idea which I shouldn't describe in detail. But as the Japs approached their target, our patrols pulled the rest of the American fighter strength off the ground. While one of our flights chased off the accompanying Zeros, the rest of the boys were picking off Jap bombers, which were sliding out of formation and going down trailing smoke. They all had to turn off before reaching the target, dump their bombs in the sea, and head back for their base at Kupang on Timor Island—one of the steppingstones to Java they'd taken away from us. But Squeeze and his gang followed them out to sea, and shot down every one of the ten bombers. Our boys returned without a man wounded or a plane scratched.

"You know," said Squeeze, "if we don't look out, we're going to make the air a safe place for Americans!"

"And after all those months of defeat, we were almost afraid to believe it. But two days later the Japs came back from Kupang with a real force—thirty-three bombers protected by eleven fighters. Again we were ready. It was a beautiful day, the sky clear as a bell, and again Squeeze tore into the whole Jap V formation far at sea. He attacked in elements, and each time he hit, another Mitsubishi would go spinning down in smoke, or else would sag below the V with engine trouble, lagging so that the next American element could pick him off. We found Jap bombers are lightly constructed, and can't soak up much punishment from our heavy .50-caliber guns—can't take the pounding our Forts can. Meanwhile the second American flight was taking care of the eleven escorting Zeros. The boys had paired off and were whirling over and over in their squirrel cages, a Jap and an American to each cage, while the first flight kept up the heavy cleaver work—chopping into that bomber V from behind, or sometimes going out ahead of it to turn and come in for a burst on its nose. They were forcing it lower—when they'd peel off and come in for a pass, it was fun watching both motors light up.

"A good many Jap bombers got over the target, but you couldn't call it a bomb run. Most of their bombs went wild, as always happens in a disrupted attack, and many others salvaged their bombs in the desert so they could run away. But those which did get over Darwin ran into Bofors ack-ack fire. The battery was operated by an old Crete gang of Aussies—the toughest hordes in the business—and the American P-40's had pushed the Jap bombers so low that the ack-ack could really rip into them. They were between that cleaver in the air and a buzz saw on the ground. Two or three Jap bombers dribbled right down onto the field, whole wings shot off or else blown into confetti. The Japs tried to use their chutes from the burning bombers—which should explode the fairy tale that Japs are too fanatical to use chutes—yet even they caught fire.

"Most of the first Jap bomber flight got over Darwin, but only part of the second, while the third jettisoned its bombs and ran like hell for Kupang.

"You see the estimated range of a Zero using belly tanks is about twelve hundred miles. It's five hundred and ten miles from Kupang to Darwin, and to go and return is a thousand and twenty miles. That leaves a tiny safety margin that is more than used up if the Zero has to do any fighting en route.

"Also by first hitting the Japs far out at sea, Squeeze forced them to drop their belly tanks—they can't fight while carrying them—and begin using their precious wing-tank gas long before they got to the target.

"All through the Australian war our fighters must have knocked off hundreds of Zeros which we've never claimed. We fight them until their gas is almost gone, and when they finally break away and start for home, they slide quietly into the sea with dry tanks.

"Those fighters at Darwin are a great gang of kids, and they've invented their own service uniform, which might not pass parade inspection back here. It consists of a long duck-billed hunter's cap, usually red, plus a pair of white cotton shorts and nothing much else. They don't like clothes because of the fire hazard—cloth soaks up spurring gasoline, which will drop off naked flesh. They won't wear ordinary shoes. This started when one of them had to bail out in the desert back of Darwin and when his chute cracked open, the jerk flipped his shoes off. He had to walk barefoot for days over the Australian desert. Now they wear tennis shoes or cowboy boots, which won't flip off. This costume includes a belt, to which is attached a jungle kit on one side and a .45 on the other. The .45 they keep covered with cellophane candy-bar wrappers so it won't rust. They look more like pirates than pilots, and so did the ones at Moresby.

"When General Brett put Buzz in charge of the Moresby-Townsville fighters, he didn't issue an order for Buzz to stay on the ground at his desk in Pursuit Interceptor Command Headquarters at Townsville, but in a nice way he unofficially requested it.

"But Buzz was itching at the paper work. He was a fighter, not a desk man. And at Moresby he had new youngsters just in from the States. Their morale was low. They'd been having an awful time with the weather, and also the Japs had been coming in and shooting up the place, catching these kids in the air and picking off too many. They needed someone to show them how to handle a P-39 Airacobra against the Zero—both planes have their points.

"So one day when he's up 'inspecting' Moresby—he spent most of his time there—without any formality Buzz steps into a P-39 and leads them. They were all agog. They've heard of the Great Wagner, but they aren't sure the stories of what he'd done in the Philippines mightn't be a myth.

"He led twelve of them out above New Guinea, over the Owen Stanley range, on a mission in the direction of the big Jap base at Lae, from which they were returning over the ocean when they ran into a Japanese trap.

"The Japs had a flight of Zeros circling a spot which our boys must pass on their homeward leg. Buzz said it was partly his fault for not having told his gang of twelve to refrain from combat on this homeward leg, because they needed all their gas to get back, while the Japs were freshly fueled from a near-by base.

"But when the two end men on the flight saw the Japs, they peeled off, and Buzz saw he'd have trouble holding the rest, so he gave the signal over the phones to go on in. Buzz said it was a lovely battle—the whole argument rolled thirty miles up the beach and then thirty miles back again, like a big tumbleweed on the prairie. Buzz shot down three Japs himself, and his wing men two—a total of five Japs for the day. We gave three planes to get them (one was forced down gasless), but we didn't lose a pilot on that flight.

"That did the business for those green, scared kids. When they saw Buzz's gunights trained on a Zero, watched his .50-caliber chewing it up right in front of them, they realized it could be done, and, more important, they saw they had a leader—which was all they needed to put them back in business.

"That night, sitting with me under the mosquito-netting canopy we'd thrown over the wing of the Swallow, was the first time I saw Buzz really worried. Because when General Brett found out about this, what would he say? Buzz was worried that the General would not only request him to stay on the ground, he'd make it an order in writing, and then the fun would be over.

"Buzz was twenty-six years old, and he hadn't gone up just to hang three more on his record, but because he really loved it. But he said in the future he thought rather than risk an order grounding him, he'd stay out of combat with Zeros and confine his activities to developing most high bombing attacks against transports. He thought his kids should all be trained to do it, and he'd done a lot himself. You come in low and horizontal in a pursuit, and just before you're on her you release your little wing bomb so that it slaps right against the transport's side at the water line. Then quick you pull up out of the anti-aircraft fire.

"We talked a lot that night. He had a fast mind, and was doing a lot of sound thinking both on tactics and about our fighters. He said in a way he wanted to get back home for a while. I'd turned down a ticket home once, and he'd turned it down twice, but now he had a reason for returning.

Illinois Man Speeds Up His Haymaking

Tractor-Drawn 'Sled' Used to Pick Up Bales

A clever method of saving labor in haying has been worked out by I. E. Houser Jr., near Farmer City in DeWitt county, Ill. On his 560-acre farm Mr. Houser has a herd of 60 Hereford cows and he has fed out as many as 175 feeder cattle and 1,000 western lambs in one year. To provide enough hay for this livestock, he fills two barns, each holding about 80 tons in bales.

Mr. Houser hires a pickup baler. The bales are dropped in the field as they come from the baler. To pick up the bales and haul them to the barn Mr. Houser built a sled which is pulled by a tractor. The sled is 20 feet long and 4 feet wide, and made from two logs and old lumber; it carries 33 bales, when loaded three bales high.

In picking up bales two men work on the sled with hooks: the tractor does not stop but moves continuously at about 2½ miles per hour. When they come alongside a bale one of the men on the sled hooks it and pulls one end onto the sled. The forward motion pushes the bale onto the sled, where both men pile it in position. The Houser's find it much easier to load this way than if the sled is stopped. They wait until the baler has made two rounds and pull the sled between two rows of bales, driving back and forth to load from either side. With the method used the three regular men on the farm can put up the hay as fast as it is baled and Mr. Houser feels that the additional charge made if a loading device were pulled directly behind the baler would not be justified.

At the center of one barn there is an elevator running up over the roof like an outside corn elevator. It consists of a wooden chute a little wider than a bale and a single chain, from a corn elevator, with four steel cleats. Power for running this continuous chain is provided by an electric motor. The end of the elevator is close to the ground so that when the bales are pulled up to it on the sled they can be tipped onto the chain without lifting. Instead of the chain Mr. Houser originally used an old threshing belt with wooden cleats.

Make those mower repairs now, before haying starts.

Larger Hybrid Acreage To Swell Corn Output

Increased plantings to hybrid varieties accounted for a large percentage of the 2,721,000-acre rise in the farm area devoted to corn in 10 Midwestern states this spring, according to a statement made public by the Middle West Soil Improvement committee, based on an analysis of U. S. department of agriculture figures.

"This increasing trend to hybrids will swell the Corn Belt's 1944 output," the statement points out. "While hybrids outyield open-pollinated varieties by 20 to 25 bushels per acre, they likewise make a bigger draft on the soil's plant food resources. Thus they create the need for better crop management methods, including the use of fertilizers not only to help produce bigger yields, but to replace to some extent at least, the soil wealth removed by the crop."

More Citrus Fruit

Total citrus fruit production for 1943-44 is expected to be about 6 per cent above 1942-43 and about 52 per cent above the average annual production in 1935-39, the U. S. department of agriculture reports. The larger orange crop is credited with the expected increase.

REORGANIZING AMERICA FOR 'FREE ENTERPRISE'

THE VAST MAJORITY of the American people wish to continue to operate under the system of free enterprise. Those who would change to some form of state socialism, with regimentation and regulation of the peoples' activities to continue after the end of the war, represent but a small minority.

For America to achieve a maximum result from free enterprise there is need for a remodeling of our hodgepodge of regulatory laws. We need a practical system of taxation; a practical and workable relationship between labor, capital and management, and a workable system of distribution for use at home and to cover our place in the world of trade.

Basic, simple, primary laws built upon the Constitution as a foundation are possible for all of these requirements. Providing such a structure is not a job for partisans, for theorists, for hobby riders or for those seeking a selfish advantage for any minority group. The construction of all such basic laws should be considered as one job because of the inter-relationship each one would bear to each other.

To provide for such needed fundamentals is a job for congress. By joint resolution there should be appointed a chairman of a board. That chairman should be empowered to name such associates, within a reasonable number, as he may deem qualified, subject to the approval of either the senate or of both houses. Such a procedure would take the preparation out of the realm of partisanship.

The men capable of doing such a job are not numerous. They must have a background of achievement; have something more practical than theories. They should, and would, undertake such a job with no thought of advantage to any one group or class, but of a fair and just result for all, for labor, capital, management, agriculture, merchant and consumer.

A chairman for such a board might be selected from such men as Bernard Baruch, Herbert Hoover, Eric Johnson and others of their type. Men who have demonstrated their ability by achievement. Men who believe in free enterprise. Men whose minds are broad enough to encompass practical needs and maximum results for the American people.

With the Constitution as a foundation we must build a new, more equitable, structure of basic law if we are to secure maximum benefits from the operation of our free enterprise system. The patchwork under which we have operated is outmoded. There is nothing basic about it. Any attempts to patch it up with more amendments will only cause additional confusion to throw the gears of our production and distribution machinery entirely out of mesh. Partisan politics, or bureaucratic theories, can have no place in the doing of such a job as is needed.

AIRCRAFT DEMAND AFTER THE WAR

THE WAR has undoubtedly increased the air-mindedness of the American people to an extent that will mean increased air transportation facilities when the war is over. That increase, should it double, treble or quadruple the demand for commercial planes, cannot possibly be great enough to provide continued operation of all, or even any major portion, of our airplane plants. When we entered the war all the aviation lines in the nation were flying less than 400 planes. To meet the war demand our airplane plants have turned out over 9,000 planes in one month. That would be enough to provide any possibly anticipated commercial demand for a year after the war.

GOP FARM PLANK

BEFORE THE REPUBLICANS complete their platform it is to be hoped they will consult Wheeler McMillen on the agricultural plank. He can give them a practical program for the encouragement of production that will assist materially in making us independent of other sections of the world for many things we now import. It will give the farmers increased income and cost the government but a fraction of the price paid for AAA and soil conservation. It is a program of production instead of scarcity. The farmer would prefer to earn his money rather than have it given to him.

HISTORY will not speak kindly of those public characters who put personal or party success ahead of national good.

CAN WE SO SYNCHRONIZE the battle of bullets and the battle of ballots as not to impede the war effort or delay the defeat of Hitler?

COMPLACENCY, THE acceptance of things as they are, with no thought or desire for improvement, is a disease for which there is no remedy.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I can't think of anything else you'll need for your Victory garden, Judge... you've got pretty nearly everything."

"I think so, too, John. Ever get your asparagus patch going?"

"I gave that up last year, Judge. Tried it six years in a row with no luck. Just haven't got the right soil, I guess?"

"Well, I think you're wise, John... no use keeping on trying things you know won't work. Just like prohibition. State-wide prohibition has been tried in this country seventy-two times in the last ninety years. It has been adopted forty-seven times in the past thirty-three years and discarded everywhere except in three states. Same thing was tried in eight provinces in Canada and in Norway, Sweden, Finland and Russia but it was an admitted failure and universally abandoned.

"The reason is prohibition does not prohibit. All you get is bootleg liquor instead of legal liquor, plus no end of crime and corruption."

Servicemen's Letters

Italy
To the members of the New Lenox United Service Club, I wish to thank very kindly for their thoughtfulness on my birthday. I sincerely hope all the boys from your community have had, and will continue to have, the same good fortune as I. Again I say, thank you, Sincerely Alvin Nelson.

Ft. Gruber, Okla. June 8, 1944

Dear friends:
It certainly is wonderful to have friends and I have found that out not only before I was inducted into the Army, but also since I've been in the army. My friends have really stuck by me in these times of distress, and I certainly express my whole-hearted thanks.

Recently I had a birthday and you good people of the United Service Club did not forget. I received the birthday card, but better still, I was sent one of those delicious boxes of fudge. I want to express my heartfelt thanks. I think that your club has done an exceptional job ever since it has been organized and I can say that if all the fellows who are under the New Lenox Service Club have been treated as I, I know that they have been made happy more than once. Keep up the good work. Yours sincerely, Bernard Ruettiger.

"WAKE UP, AMERICA!"

This newspaper will publish the famous "Wake Up, America!" WEEKLY debate feature of the American Economic Foundation.

Each week two persons of national standing—usually on opposite sides of the fence—will debate on subjects that have a special wartime interest to our readers. Each states his premise on a vital subject, challenges the other with a question, then answers the other's challenge in rebuttal.

This feature has all the appeal so dear to Americans—the appeal of argument, challenging and incisive.

Topics discussed are of the utmost importance to our war success and and to the post-war era.

These debates exemplify our cherished tradition of free speech, and we believe that the "Wake Up, America!" weekly column will help fill the need for free, frank and open discussion of vital problems in the interest of nationally unity and the preservation of our free institutions.

First appearance of this feature will be Friday, July 7, 1944.

Alaskan STAMPEDE Is A Big Show

Singers, skaters, actresses, actors and musician still rehearsing daily to tighten up and improve the high spectacle at the Coliseum, "Alaskan Stampede," are interesting to chat with in the lulls between acts. They are a harmonious family and enjoy discussion among themselves on many topics. The topic that never fails to come uppermost is the war—and with good reason.

Tiny singing star, Margaret Spencer, is so proud of her husband Max Bessler, "A Lieutenant Colonel if you please", with the American forces in Europe; and Evelyn Chandler, whose little girl, Susie, twenty-one months old, sits in a sled in the ice arena watching mother do stunts, wonders every day, what her two boys are doing. They are 17 and 18 and both in the armed forces.

Ted Danks who plays Dead-Eye Dick, the rather good natured Alaskan villain, tells fascinating stories of his throbred malemutes, which he has raised and handled for years; and Earl Covert, strong but not silent man of the Yukon, for his singing of the baritone role is one of the show's major features spends his spare moments playing with his little son, Gary. Gary is three and a half, and is here with his mother but misses his little pals at home in Los Angeles. He shares with his father a love of dogs and has made fast friends with Tony, the huge malemute which his father is training under Dank's instruction. Covert did not drive one of the dog teams at the show's opening because of switching numbers on the program, but it is a regular part of his role, and the most fun he has had for a long time, he declares.

Wini Shaw, not long ago returned from entertaining the boys over seas, has some first hand information to contribute to the war talk. Mimi, who is Audrey Miller of Toronto, Canada, who is an expert in every type of skating ballet from classic to jive, says she never wants any of her children to be skaters.

Just returned from a 32,000-mile trip with Jack Benny and company, entering service men in all parts of the world, Wini Shaw is one of the most traveled popular singers. Her entertainment travels started in Hawaii just a month after Pearl Harbor, and she has been singing for the boys ever since. She was the first woman entertainer to arrive in Sicily after the invasion of Italy.

Wini Shaw is the product of Chicago's St. Xavier's College.

Sweet heroine of the "Alaskan Stampede" is petite songstress Margaret Spencer, co-starred once more with her former singing partner, Earl Covert. The two sang the leading roles in the recent Chicago production of "Blossom Time," and are singing their way into the hearts of Chicago audiences again. Margaret's singing of "Please God Take Care of My Man", and Earl's solo of the song from the snow-capped mountains of the north, realistically reproduced in the magnificent scenery, are high lights of the performance.

Mimi, hottest thing on ice, and exponent of the rumba on skates, is an important flash of color and vivacity from Canada.

Twenty-four beautiful girls with perfect rhythm on skates, make up the ice revue. In interesting and colorful costumes, they provide a unique background for a double Alaskan wedding on ice at the foot of the mountains which literally tower above the whole scene, filling one end of the Coliseum.

Here is a realistic reproduction of Mt. McKinley and an artistic enactment of the world-famous aurora borealis set to appropriate music, augmented by a lovely, flexible-voiced choir.

HOME CANNED PEACHES DELICIOUS WHETHER CLING OR FREE-STONE

Clingstone peaches are excellent, but a great many persons prefer the flavor of freestone fruit and also find it somewhat less troublesome to prepare for canning. Whether cling or freestone, good raw peaches make good canned ones, provided they are canned right, but right canning can do nothing for greenish, bitterish, poorly flavored fruit.

Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, advises those who can peaches for the first time, and those whose canned peaches are below par, to select tree-ripened fruit, when possible, and sort it for size, color, and condition before washing and peeling it.

Skins may be stripped from some well-ripened peaches after they have been scalded in boiling water about a minute and then dipped in cold water, but the general run of them require other methods of peeling. The lye method, while practical when a large quantity is to be canned, requires skill. To lye peel, put four tablespoons concentrated lye in an enamel or granite kettle. Add two gallons water and heat to boiling. Put peaches in a basket and hold in the boiling lye from thirty to sixty seconds; then wash immediately in cold water. Rinse through several waters to remove all skins and all traces of lye. The fruit will darken if left in lye too long or if not well rinsed.

Usually, paring with a knife is the most practical way of peeling. The peaches should be washed clean and drained before peeling. After peeling, the fruit should be cut in half, and the stones discarded. Freestone fruit has better flavor and nicer, cleaner appearance if the red fibers are cut or scraped from the cavities.

Dropping the peeled peaches into weak salt-vinegar water (one tablespoon each to one gallon of water) helps prevent discoloring. They should not be left in the water longer than thirty or forty minutes and must be well rinsed before canning.

Clingstone peaches are prepared for canning by removing the skins by one of the methods described above. Clings may be halved (before peeling) by cutting around the peach with a sharp knife, beginning at the stem end and following the crease. After cutting, hold the peach with both hands and twist in opposite directions. This pulls one side away from the stone. Use a regular peach pitting spoon, a teaspoon, or a knife to remove the stone from the other half of the peach. Peel the halves by scalding, by the lye method, or by paring with knife. If preferred, the peach may be peeled and then halved by cutting around the stone with knife. The easiest way to remove the flesh from the stone is to cut it in wedge-shaped slices.

Miss Kimbrough recommends hot packing and processing in a hot-water bath canner. Here are her two favorite recipes: (Use the longer cooking and processing time for clings and other very fine peaches.) Method I. Make a sirup of 1 or 2 parts sugar to 1 of water, depending upon the amount liked and the amount available. Add peaches, a few at a time, and simmer until hot through (4 to 10 minutes). Pack into hot jars, layers overlapping, cavity side down. Cover with sirup in which peaches were cooked. Process (cook in jar) 10 to 20 minutes in hot-water bath. Can left-over sirup for pudding or ice cream sauce.

Method II. Add from 1 to 1½ cup sugar and one cup boiling water to one gallon prepared peaches. Cook gently until peaches are hot through and sugar dissolved (10 to 20 minutes). Pack and process as instructed above. If there isn't enough liquid to cover peaches in jar, add boiling water after they are packed.

If one is short of sugar, a sirup may be made by boiling two cups white corn sirup, two cups sugar, one cup water, and one-eighth teaspoon salt together five minutes. Honey may be used instead of sugar but it changes the flavor, and sometimes the color, of the fruit. From three-quarters to one cup sirup is usually needed for one quart of peaches. The fruit should be well covered with liquid. (If one runs out of sugar, peaches may be canned with plain boiling water. They keep just as well that way but do not have as good flavor.)

Once fine fruit is selected, carefully prepared and processed right, canning success is assured if jars and caps are used according to the manufacturers' instructions. These instructions will be found on printed leaflets packed in every carton.

SATURDAY, Sunday and night baseball have already taken care of the 1944 season and these factors will continue to operate until autumn leaves begin turning red and gold.

Weekday afternoon attendances jump from 1,200 and 1,500 per game to anything from 20,000 to 50,000 under the conditions named above. This is largely due to war work but it may also become a fixture after the war is over.

There is still a fourth factor that has been a big help. This is the closeness of both races, especially the American league, where there is no outstanding team.

From the 16 teams in both leagues only the Cardinals have any decided advantage and if they happen to lose a few men to the draft, the scramble will then be complete.

The one big weakness in major league baseball has been the fact that in the last few years, two or three teams have dominated the two races, leaving the other 13 or 14 outfits struggling to see the leader's vanishing dust.

Year after year, we've seen the Yankees so far in front by July that you could turn your attention to something else. In the last few years the Cardinals and Dodgers have been the only teams that counted in the National.

A few years back the Tigers, Indians and Reds broke up this combination for a short spell, only to subside later on.

But it's all different now. The greatness that was the Yankees belongs to "the glory that was Greece—and the grandeur that was Rome."

Week after week eight American league clubs have been running along only a few games apart, from top to bottom. Six of the eight clubs have been traveling in a compact bunch and there isn't a manager in the league who can pick you a favorite with assurance. The Yankees can win it, or they can finish fourth. This applies to the Senators, Browns, Tigers and others.

More Interesting Races

There have been only a few seasons in some 40 years where baseball had two or three teams in both leagues still in the race after August. The greatest single season was 1908 when Cubs, Giants and Pirates were deadlocked through September in the National league and where the Tigers, White Sox and Indians were well bunched in the American.

But in later years the Yankees began wrecking their league, where you knew by July Fourth there was only one club left in the race. In the meanwhile Cardinals, Reds and Dodgers at least gave the National league a few continued thrills.

Everyone knows today the caliber of war baseball has fallen off badly. No game can lose such men as DiMaggio, Feller, Dickey, Ted Williams, Joe Gordon, Herman, Red Ruffing, Keller, Slaughter, Terry Moore and a hundred others without showing the deficit. But the quality of the two pennant races has more than made up for the absence of so many shining headlights. After all there is no big kick in watching the home club struggling along from 12 to 30 games in the rut.

The wonder is that baseball has done as well with so many lopsided races, with certain teams losing from 90 to a 100 games each season as others won from 90 to a 100.

Baseball has needed a better distribution of playing talent, but I still wouldn't know how to bring that about with larger cities and wealthier owners having all the best of it.

The war has taken charge of this weakness. Among the 16 major league clubs it has left only the Cardinals with any decided playing advantage so far. The Cardinals will still have to lose more than one or two of their best men to fall back with the pack, and make it a real two league scramble. Just how many more will be taken into war service is still anybody's guess.

After all, what the public wants is a contest—not a runaway or a walkover. Those who have lived in second division cities, watching their ball clubs try to finish sixth or seventh, can understand this much better than those pulling for pennant-winning teams, high up in the race.

Home-Run Timing

When it comes to the matter of home-run timing, pound for pound, weight for age, displacement and power, Mel Ott of the Giants comes close to leading the entire collection. It must be remembered that Ott, the lone entry from the National league, had to battle against such American league mammoths as Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Lou Gehrig and Hank Greenberg, who outclassed Mel in every physical way, all over 200 pounds, all six footers, with Greenberg at 6 feet 4.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RED Rolfe, former Yankee third baseman and now coach at Yale, has done a bit of postwar planning which should appeal to every person interested in baseball.

Rolfe suggests that colleges start planning for a national baseball championship after the war—a collegiate "World Series." He admits there is nothing new in the idea, but at least it comes at an opportune time. Most college leaders—both academic and athletic—are envisioning enlarged athletic programs following the war. And baseball is the most natural game of all to a majority of the nation's youngsters.

It is natural that high schools should take a keen interest in the sport. Schools in the smaller towns usually have a good supply of talent for this type of competition. The cost is not prohibitive, and the support given many small town high school teams verges on the phenomenal.

Legion Program

The American Legion, despite wartime restrictions and difficulties, is continuing its junior baseball program—one of the finest sports undertakings in history. Most state high school championships are being held as usual.

There is one obvious reason why little attention is paid to college baseball in most instances. The reason is financial. Seldom can it support itself, much less show a profit. The Big Ten has kept the game fairly healthy, but has done little to make it a real drawing card.

Baseball is looked upon as a minor sport in the college world. But it isn't natural that so popular a game should be so neglected. With so many people interested in the game, why relegate it to the same position occupied by swimming, fencing, etc. Not that there is anything the matter with those sports, but they never have captured the public imagination. Baseball has.

Rolfe suggests a sectional elimination series with the Pacific coast champions playing the Big Six or Missouri valley winners; the Southwest against the Southeast and the Midwest against the East.

"The play-offs and championship series could be completed within ten days after the college terms end in June," Rolfe says. That would necessitate some schools keeping their players on deck for a week or two, but precedent wouldn't be broken. The N. C. A. A. track and field championships do the same thing.

Possible Aid

It is also Rolfe's suggestion that the major leagues would help conduct the tournament. It is only natural they would have an interest in the meet, since they are always interested in looking over the good college players. However, it is unlikely that the schools concerned would accept any outside help.

But it is more than possible to secure an agreement under which the major leagues—or the minors—would not deal with a student until his class has graduated. For more than 20 years the National Football league has done this. Every once in a while a slight irritation is caused when a player quits school to join the ranks, but those instances are few enough so that they shouldn't be allowed to throttle any workable plan.

Most baseball coaches affiliated with colleges will approve of Rolfe's plan. At least it is something concrete. It could bring college baseball back to its former glory.

EVERY FARMER KNOWS an unbraced corner fence post leans with the pull of the wire, weakening the entire fence.

Unbraced tread bars on tractor tires, likewise bend and weaken under heavy loads. They slip, lose traction, lose time and wear rapidly.

Traction bars on Firestone Ground Grip tires are triple-braced and have up to 215 inches of extra bar length per tractor. That gives them extra strength, extra pulling power and extra long life. And triple-braced traction bars clean better, too.

If you want tires that pull better longer buy Ground Grips — the tires made by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker in the farm tire field.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Up to the beginning of last year, B. F. Goodrich produced more butadiene-type general purpose synthetic rubber than all other plants in America, including those owned by the government. The first U. S. commercial butadiene-type synthetic plant was set up by B. F. Goodrich in 1939.

Black derbies, frequently called "iron hats," are said to be the most popular exchange medium for rubber among the Indians of the San Blas region of Panama. No mention has been made of premiums for brown derbies!

Telegraph Centennial Brings New Devices

Miss Leila Livingston Morse, granddaughter of Samuel F. B. Morse, left, explains to Miss Mildred Crider, telegraph employee, the workings of the original instrument. It was used in re-enacting the sending of the first telegram, "What Hath God Wrought!" from the Capitol in Washington to Baltimore.

New York (Special)—An aircraft designer in New York has just finished an elaborate set of blueprints for a huge new trans-oceanic plane. The blueprints must be at the manufacturing plant in California tomorrow. How can it be done? By telegraph, of course.

That is one of the things the communications industry will be prepared to do not many years from now, when the war is over and the latest marvels stemming from an invention just a century old will be used to tie the nation together in building a new era of peace-time prosperity.

It was in 1844 that the artist-inventor, Samuel F. M. Morse, sat down at his telegraph key in the Capitol at Washington and sent the first telegram—"What Hath God Wrought!" The message was received in Baltimore forty miles away.

The nation is observing this year the centennial of Morse's invention by special Congressional exercises, including a re-enactment of the scene in which the first telegram was sent; by unveiling a plaque in honor of the scientist; by naming a Liberty ship for him and by issuing a telegraph centennial postage stamp. Civic, educational, scientific and other organizations are holding special gatherings.

On the threshold of its second century, the telegraph industry is ready to offer many new devices and services to American business as well as to the individual. Only the war and the need for turning over much of this new equipment to war-time tasks have kept these devices from more general use.

The Telefax is one of the latest and most remarkable additions to the telegraph family. An electric eye rapidly scans a hand-written message, a picture, a blueprint or a maze of figures and the Telefax transmits it over the wire. "Messages" of this kind arrive at their destinations as facsimiles of the originals. The service operates simply as well as quickly and with 100 per cent accuracy.

Progressive installation of the re-perforator switching system is part of the Western Union Telegraph Company's long-range modernization program.

One development which is helping us with our war business is carrier current. This was discovered a number of years ago and engineers have been constantly improving it. With carrier current it is possible to send many messages at one time over a single pair of wires. Today a hundred telegrams may flash over telegraph wires simultaneously with never a mix-up.

Curiously enough, the telegraph has passed through a complete cycle since Morse's day. The inventor's first instruments were of a semi-automatic type, but gave way to the hand-operated key until more recent times. Today automatic equipment has virtually replaced the old-time telegraph. Every year the Morse telegraph key is used less and less.

Most messages in telegraph offices are written on machines known as teleprinters which have keyboards like typewriters. The printed telegrams you receive are from a teleprinter.

Thousands of business firms, war plants and military centers throughout the country have their own teleprinters. With them, the offices can communicate with telegraph offices or with branch offices, suppliers and clients in distant cities.

Why a Farmer Should Buy and Keep War Bonds

by O. G. Lloyd
Head, Dept. of Agricultural Economics
Purdue University

FOR more than 16 months farmers have enjoyed the most favorable exchange of farm dollars for Bond dollars in more than a quarter of a century. Based upon 1935-39 as 100, farmers have sold farm products at the average ratio of $140 for every $100 paid, including interest and taxes. This ratio compares most favorably with the decade 1920-29 with a ratio of 105 and especially with the decade 1930-39 when the ratio fell to 89 or an $11 loss compared to the base period of 100 in 1935-39.

Granting that the post war period price level will not fall lower than the level of 1935-39 for a long period of time, the advantage of exchanging war inflated farm dollars for War Bond dollars is obvious. Ordinary business transactions are made on a margin of less than 10 percent compared to this extraordinary exchange of 40 percent.

To obtain the 40 percent advantage of inflationary farm dollars, it is necessary to keep the War Bonds until prices are deflated to the 1935-39 level. In the meantime the interest paid on the investment will increase the value of the bond 33 1/3 percent or a War Bond costing $75 will be redeemed by the Government at $100.

During periods of stationary and of falling prices of farm products, which are probable during the next decade, farming will have urgent demands for liquid capital which can be readily turned into cash for equipment and improvements. Such expenditures wisely made pay big dividends through more economical production which meets current demand. At such periods the wise farmer is not handicapped for operating capital if he owns War Bonds. Backed by the credit of the Government, War Bonds are so secure and so readily convertible into purchasing power that they excel the land itself as a means of providing ready cash.

The discipline of following a budget which requires savings for investment promotes prudent spending of time and money. When the amount for spending is reduced in order to invest for private and public benefit, an increased satisfaction is gained by a new evaluation of current needs in terms of making the investment goals possible. It is little wonder then that such War Bond purchasers marvel that current needs are met about as fully as before and the Bond seems to be more of a gift than of a sacrifice of present wants. Savings for buying War Bonds are obtained, therefore, with the least friction of daily living when accompanied by judicious spending.

Farming is an occupation which offers an excellent example of the American principle of free enterprise. Farmers should buy War Bonds and keep them because their industry and efficiency have given them the highest production per man of farmers in any country. Without high production per man, there cannot be much to spend on current needs, much to save for purchase of War Bonds and much to give to any worthy cause. Now that high purchasing power of farm products is accompanied by high physical production of farm products per man, the income of farmers has been increased correspondingly and farmers are able and willing to buy War Bonds. Such purchases are not only a smart investment for high economic and patriotic returns, but farmers can avail themselves of the opportunity today because they do have the money to make the purchase of the War Bonds and should keep them in order to obtain the highest returns on the investment.
